CENTRAL — After eight years of Democratic rule under Gov. John Bel Edwards, Louisiana politics seems to be in the midst of a dramatic turn. If polling is correct, Republican Attorney General Jeff Landry, and Democratic Secretary of Transportation and Development Shawn Wilson will end up in a run-off election, scheduled for Nov. 18. Attorney General Landry is the most conservative of the four major Republicans in the race and stands in marked contrast to Gov. Edwards, who largely governed from the left, at least by Louisiana standards. Secretary Wilson, who has defended Edwards' positions, would likely serve as a continuation of the Edwards administration. Landry could be the most conservative governor in modern times, especially when it comes to personal liberty, right to life, traditional family values, low taxes, and support for law enforcement. Landry would be strongly favored in a Landry-Wilson runoff.

Blue Cross Withdraws Proposed Sale... for Now

Controversial Plan To Sell Blue Cross, Strip Assets Could Return Next Year

BATON ROUGE — Local small business owners met at the Chamber of Commerce of East Baton Rouge Parish last week to their continue their attacks against a plan by the Board of Directors of Blue Cross of Louisiana to sell the company to a for-profit out-of-state insurance giant, Elevance.

But just hours before the meeting, Blue Cross announced it was shelving the plan to sell the company and hand the $2.5 billion sales price and $900 million in excess reserves to a new Delaware non-profit foun-the theft of $3.4 billion belonging to policy holders and as a step toward Louisiana losing Blue Cross and many of its 3,500 employees as Elevance consolidates and economizes.

Blue Cross announced that it would be coming back next year with a new plan to sell the company — when Louisiana has a new insurance commissioner and a new governor. However, as Blue Cross ran for the hills with its plan, members of the Chamber only intensified their fire. Chamber chairman Cecil Cavanaugh said his group wants to keep the plan dead.

The Chamber got plenty of help from New Orleans attorney Henry “Tut” Kinney who roasted the plan and the Blue Cross Board for proposing it. Click this QR code to hear his remarks Sept. 26 at the ChamberEBR.

Supreme Court Refuses Pastor Spell Case But State Court Case Is Moving Forward

EDITOR’S NOTE: The U.S. Supreme Court this week refused to hear a civil case filed in federal court by Rev. Tony Spell and Life Tabernacle seeking damages against Gov. John Bel Edwards and others for violation of their civil rights during the pandemic. However, both Pastor Spell and the church have a separate civil case in state court, which they are pursuing. Most attorneys who have studied the case tell us the case is stronger under state law and has a good chance of success, especially since the Louisiana Supreme Court already ruled on the principal issues when they threw out the criminal charges against Pastor Spell. Our thanks to TheHayride for allowing us to reprint this article by Connie Hair.

BATON ROUGE — The importance of getting out to vote for Amendment No. 2 on the Oct. 14 ballot protecting churches was just kicked up a notch when the Supreme Court of the United States denied certiorari, or judicial review, of the case of Pastor Tony Spell v. [soon-to-be former] Gov. John Bel Edwards, et al. As bill sponsor Sen. Beth Mizell said when she brought what became Amendment No. 2, “In the latest action that we went through with the pandemic, churches were the last gathering places that were allowed to open. This bill attempts to affirm a right that was put in place at our founding which is the freedom of worship.” Amendment No. 2 would protect churches, giving them top priority and protection. In March 2020, Edwards issued a diktat from the Governor’s Mansion that limited gatherings to 50 people or less. He then shrank that number to 10. Pastor Spell refused to shut down his church and was subjected to every guise imaginable to bring state power against him to force him to close his church, including charges for violating the stay-at-home orders. Mind you, there were businesses that were allowed to stay open that were favorable to Democrat Gov. Edwards, but he wanted the churches closed. Food, liquor, abortions, all could be had but not church, which is guaranteed in the First Amendment of the Constitution. On May, 13, 2022, the Louisiana Supreme Court upheld Spell’s challenge to those charges, ruling that his constitutional rights had been violated. Justice William J. Crain wrote in the majority opinion, “A public health emergency does not relegate the First Amendment to a proposition or allow violations thereof to be judged on a sliding scale of constitutionality. The infringement of the fundamental right of the free exercise of religion, whether in times of crisis or calm, must always be strictly scrutinized by our courts.” When Pastor Spell sued the long list of public officials who had, according to the Louisiana Supreme Court, violated the pastor’s civil rights, the federal courts ruled that churches were no better than a strip club, a liquor store or an abortion clinic, none of which are expressly protected in the Constitution. Pastor Spell was expressly told by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals that he could be awarded millions of dollars if he would agree with that notion in the case, but he refused, so the 5th Circuit decided against him. His legal team applied for relief to U.S. Supreme Court, to defend the notion that the free exercise of religion in a church is not on the same footing as a strip club or abortion clinic. SCOTUS did not have four of the nine justices desirous of reviewing the case. Pastor Spell released the following statement in response to the denial of certiorari: “On May 5, 2023, after being denied the highest order of protection guaranteed the Church through the First Amendment by the U.S. 5th Circuit, we filed our case in the U.S. Supreme Court. After 150 days in the court and being in conference seven days since Sept. 26, 2023, this morning on October 2, 2023, the Court declined to hear the argu-

Jeff Landry: A Guardian of Our Liberty

Attorney General
Jeff Landry

When Our Liberties Were Under Attack, Jeff Landry Stood Like a Great Oak

Woody Jenkins

CENTRAL — In August 2020, when Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards was in the midst of his all-out assault on the Constitution and common sense, most elected officials were silent. They were afraid to stand up to the governor, the bureaucracy, and the left-wing media.

Only one statewide elected official in Louisiana stood unabashedly for the principles that made America great and supported the Constitution and the rule of law.

That elected official, Attorney General Jeff Landry, was busier than a one-armed paper hanger in state and federal courts and in the media, demanding that the massive violation of our liberties be halted.

He fought the lock downs, the mask mandates, the vaccine mandates, the school closures, and the forced closure of churches.

He seemed to be everywhere. While others were silent, he refused to hold his tongue, no matter what the governor did or what the bought-and-paid-for media said.

Landry was in state and federal courts all over Louisiana. And not just here in Louisiana! He made alliances with Attorneys General from other states, so they could stand together and challenge things in federal court with greater strength.

Significantly, Gen. Landry began to win. Not just cases at the state level. But federal cases that had national impact. Among other things, he won the case that prohibited the federal government from mandating vaccines nationwide.

Here in Central, Landry's support of Rev. Tony Spell and Life Tabernacle's decision to continue holding church ultimately led to a sweeping decision by the Louisiana Supreme Court on May 13, 2022. That decision said everything Gov. Edwards and his henchmen in the bureaucracy had done to Rev. Spell and the members of Life Tabernacle was illegal and unconstitutional. All criminal charges were dismissed by the Supreme Court.

But there is one part of this story that demands special attention.

Let's go back to August 2020 when Attorney General Jeff Landry was in the middle of all these battles. It was unprecedented, and there was no playbook telling him how to combat this great assault on the Constitution and our liberties.

He and his staff had to work long hours and work through legal situations that no Attorney General in any state had ever faced before.

In the midst of all this, a call came in to Landry about a small business that was having a problem. It wasn't from Wal-Mart or Target or any of the giants. The national media didn't know about it. In fact, the local media didn't know much about it either.

The call was from a young woman in Livingston Parish who had just purchased a small café in Watson called Firehouse Barbecue. The young lady was Danielle Bunch. Despite its colorful name, Firehouse Barbecue was just a small restaurant owned by a single mom who had invested her life savings into it. She bought the business in June and it had passed all the health, safety, and fire code inspections late that month.

Now suddenly, the Louisiana Department of Health had placed a notice on her door ordering her to close the business! Why? Well, it seems that several of her employees had health problems that made it dangerous for them to wear masks. Danielle's position was that since the employees couldn't wear masks, it made no sense to try to force customers to wear masks.

Besides, she knew the masks were completely useless!

At that time, Gov. John Bel Edwards was demanding that everyone who entered a restaurant had to have a mask on until they got to their table. Then they could take the masks off! Now that's science!

Danielle refused to go along with this cynical charade, and Edwards' bureaucracy was after her, determined to make an example of her.

They had tried and failed to close Life Tabernacle and put Rev. Tony Spell in jail for more than a couple of hours. But Ms. Bunch was a far easier target. No big church to back her. No First Amendment to protect her. No money to hire big lawyers. The Edwards Administration smelled blood. Maybe they could finally put a scalp on their belt, albeit the scalp of a tiny small business woman. They were determined to close Firehouse Barbecue and put Danielle Bunch in jail! She needed help. Somehow, the attorney general found out.

Now here is what is interesting and is one of the reasons this endorsement is being written.

Jeff Landry didn't call a news conference. He picked up the phone and called Danielle Bunch and asked if he could come have lunch at her place. He invited Congressman Clay Higgins, Rep. Valarie Hodges, and me to come along to show support for Danielle Bunch and her little team at Firehouse Barbecue.

It was a wonderful lunch, resembling a group of revolutionaries who were there to plan how to rescue one of their own who was under attack. The attorney general gathered the facts as a good lawyer would do and then told Danielle he was on-board and would do everything he could to support her. She had felt completely abandoned. She cried and said thank you. But she must have wondered... Is he for real? Will he really do anything to help?

It turned out that Jeff Landry was true to his word! He filed a friend-of-the-court brief letting the district judge handling the case know where the Attorney General's office

Sen. Elbert Guillory Endorsed for Lt. Governor

Elbert Guillory: A Real Life Freedom Fighter

He Went to Jail at 15 for the Right to Sit in the Library And Read a Book

Woody Jenkins
Editor

OPELOUSAS — Sen. Elbert Guillory is the first and only black Republican to serve in the Louisiana Senate since Reconstruction, which ended nearly 150 years ago! But he is far more than that.

Guillory is one of the most articulate spokesmen for conservative causes in the United States and one of the best thinkers who can explain why the Constitution, the rule of law, and traditional values are even more important for black people than for whites.

His classic film, Why I Am a Republican, has been viewed more than 5 million times. It lays out the case for black people entering the mainstream of American society, forsaking the false promises of the welfare state, and embracing freedom, free enterprise, and love of country. It can be viewed by going to https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=n_YQ8560E1w

Besides being an active leader in the Republican Party, Elbert Guillory is a civil rights activist and attorney who has been willing to risk everything to protect the rights of all citizens.

Elbert Guillory didn't start as a champion of civil rights! It all started by accident when he was 15. He simply wanted to be able to go to the parish library and check out some books!

Born in 1944, he grew up in Opelousas in St. Landry Parish, during a time when almost everything was segregated, including his school. In those days, most people, black and white, accepted segregation. "We really didn't know anything different," he said.

He remembers going to restaurants, and his family would have to go around back to order food. They couldn't go inside and eat. They had to eat outside or take it home.

Elbert said he didn't think much about it. Then one day when he was five he asked his daddy to take him to get a hamburger. When they got to the restaurant, his dad told him to wait out front. He said, "Watch this!" Then his father, who was very light skinned, walked right in the front door like the white people did, and soon came out with hamburgers to go!

"It was my first time to think about race," he said.

As a teenager, Elbert loved books. The parish library in St. Landry Parish was well stocked, but blacks couldn't use it. The library wasn't segregated! Instead, blacks were barred from using it at all!

However, if you were black and in school, you could at least use your school library. If your school library did not have a book, the school library could order it for you from the parish library and a few days later you could pick up the book at your school. The system worked, and he didn't know anything different, Elbert said.

However, when he was 15, there was a problem. Elbert planned to do a lot of reading that summer. However, the school library was closed, so there was no way to get books from the parish library — if you were black!

Not thinking it all through, he decided to walk to the parish library and see if he could check out some books directly. He had his parish library card, which he used for ordering books through the school library.

He walked in the front door of the parish library and told the librarian he wanted to check out some books. She told him he could but he would have to go through his school library. He reminded her the school library was closed for the summer.

The librarian was very quick tempered and direct. She told him to get his butt out of the library!

Elbert thought about it for a minute and decided instead to sit down at a table in the library and read some magazines.

"I sat there, knowing she had called the police on me. I was trembling and scared to death! I can't remember what I was reading. All I was thinking about was being arrested and going to jail. But I wouldn't leave the library like she told me."

It was his first act of defiance! "Soon the police came, took me downtown, and I was arrested. Then juvenile officers took me home to my parents," he said.

"Libraries are an important part of education, and they were important to my family."

"The day of the arrest, I was 15. Before the arrest, I was thinking of becoming a doctor. But after the arrest, I thought of only one thing. I wanted to become a warrior against injustice. I had to be a lawyer!"

Thinking back, Guillory said, "It was only a one-man demonstration at the public library. It wasn't planned. I didn't make the newspaper. There was no public notice and it got no attention whatsoever, but it changed my life. I decided I would never again sit idly by while people's rights were being violated."

"Over the years, I often had others demonstrating with me, and sometimes they were white. Over the years, I got beat up pretty bad. That experience left scars on my body but not on our heart! It was me against injustice!"

Sen. Guillory is not a bitter man, although he could be, because he has seen so much injustice in his life. Instead, he has turned experiences which could have made him bitter into life lessons he uses to change the world.

Sen. Guillory and his son Elbert Guillory, Jr., are talented filmmakers who inform and inspire their audiences. Millions of people have watched their videos.

In one film, Elbert Sr. tells the story of a black man and his family who were being persecuted by night riders in the 1930's. The men came to his house in the middle of the night to rob, steal, and perhaps kill.

But the black man had been in the U.S. Army during World War I. He had plenty of combat experience and had planned for just such an attack. He hid his wife and children under furniture and mattresses. The former soldier had several guns. He stationed them around the house and ran from window to window, firing at the angry mob.

"They must have thought they were fighting a small army," he said. Two of the criminals were wounded and the rest fled. With no one to help him, the black man had saved his family and their home!

"Do you see the importance of the 2nd Amendment to blacks?" Guillory asks his viewers.

Then he revealed that the family in that house was his, that the black man was his father, that it was his brother and sister hovering in that house, and that it all happened a few years before he was born.

Guillory talked about how since the Civil War Democrats have been trying to disarm Americans. If they had their way, only the government and criminals would have guns, he said.

Watch at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=XepJouchGWl>

Sen. Guillory is unrelenting in his determination to show that the Constitution is for every man and woman, black or white.

He talks about abortion and how most of the babies killed are black. A strong supporter of the right to life, he has been honored by Louisiana Right to Life.

As a civil rights lawyer and a conservative Republican legislator, he explains that conservative principles are the only principles consistent with living in freedom and fulfilling our God-given potential.

His grandfather was a slave who stayed on the plantation and continued to work for the man who had owned him before emancipation. Eventually, his grandfather bought the land, which is where Elbert and his family still live today.

Elbert Guillory earned his Juris Doctor degree from Rutgers University, where he later served as a member of the faculty.

He has had a very distinguished career in Opelousas and St. Landry:

- 50 years as a practicing attorney, including service as Assistant City Attorney; general counsel for the Magnolia Peace Officers Association, and supervising attorney for Acadiana Legal Services.
- Past President, St. Landry Parish Bar Association
- Past President, St. Landry Chamber of Commerce
- Board of Directors, Washington State Bank
- Past President, Opelousas-St. Landry Mental Health
- Editorial board and columnist, Opelousas Daily World newspaper
- Board of Directors, New Life Center for battered wives
- Board of Directors, Lafayette Catholic Services

Elbert Guillory's career also led him to governmental service in other states where he held responsible positions. These included:

- Chairman, Maryland Association of Human Rights
- Division Director, Pennsylvania Human Rights Commission
- Executive Director, Seattle Human Rights Commission

During his years as a member of the Louisiana House of Representatives and the Louisiana Senate, Guillory distinguished himself by his conservative voting record.

He received the Louisiana Family Forum Patrick Henry Award, the Louisiana Right to Life Legislative Award, Louisiana State Troopers Legislator of the Year, Lafayette Chamber Legislator of the Year, and many others.

He served four years in the United States Navy during the Vietnam War. English is his native tongue but he is conversant in French and German.

The Central City News is honored to endorse Elbert Guillory for Lt. Governor in the Oct. 14 election.

stood. He supported her publicly and encouraged her. The governor pushed the case to the max and tried his best to put Danielle in jail.

But Danielle Bunch was represented by attorney Jeff Wittenbrink and backed up by Attorney General Jeff Landry! In the end, she won a total victory! Danielle never had to close Firehouse Barbecue for an even day or spend a minute in jail.

Without fanfare or any personal or political gain, Jeff Landry came to aid of this courageous American woman who was under attack by her own government.

That's why we know Jeff Landry is for real! He's not just another politician but a man who loves liberty and who will fight for it when the chips are down and the going gets tough. There are a hundred other stories we could tell about Jeff Landry and his tenacious battle for the rights of the people during the pandemic! The story of Danielle Bunch is typical but just one.

Jeff Landry proved he will stand up for the little guy when there's nothing in it for him, even if it means standing up to the whole world!

We like to think that's what this newspaper is all about too, and it is exciting to think Louisiana could have a governor willing to do the same thing!

For the Central City News, endorsing a candidate for governor this year is an easy decision. That's why we are proud to endorse Jeff Landry for Governor!

Mike Francis Fighting For Election Integrity

He Stood Up to Governors When It Was Necessary

Woody Jenkins
Editor

LAFAYETTE — Mike Francis made a small fortune in the oil patch and got tired of watching corruption in Louisiana politics. With more than 500 employees, he could see how state government was destroying our economy and making it impossible to compete with Texas. In the 1990's he ran for and was elected Republican State Chairman to try to bring about change. He strongly supported Mike Foster for Governor in 1995. Gov. Foster ran on a pledge of no new taxes. So when the new Republican governor called his Republican state chairman asking for support for a major tax increase, Mike Francis gave the governor a big NO! It was something of a shock to the new governor. Mike Francis said, "We didn't need more taxes and the governor ran on a no-new-taxes platform!"

How could I support it?" Gov. Foster didn't take the NO lightly and targeted Francis for defeat. But the Republican chairman turned around and sued the governor on another matter, and he won! A Republican state chairman suing a Republican governor? Well, it just doesn't happen. But Mike Francis wasn't looking for anything from the governor — except honest, conservative government. Mike Francis wasn't going after Gov. Foster in particular. He had sued Edwin Edwards when Edwards was governor and won too! This independent, no nonsense posture is important in our Secretary of State, who must be strong and courageous enough to stand up to any politician, good or bad, who wants to bend the rules. Five years ago, Mike Francis ran for and was elected to the Louisiana Public Service Commission, where he has fought to protect the consumer and rein in the big utilities. Now he is a candidate for Secretary of State, running on a platform of election integrity. The Republican Party has endorsed Mike Francis because of the principled and honest stand he has taken.

Having served as your State Representative, Barry Ivey has built a reputation as one of the strongest voices against Deep Pocket Special Interests, Establishment Politics, and an apathetic legislature, particularly when THEIR interests don't align with YOUR interests. Barry even called them "the laziest group of people I've ever worked with" in a chamber speech. Barry knows we must overcome our FAILED status-quo and focus on POLICY to truly transform Louisiana. Like you, Barry is tired of Louisiana continuing to fail our children and grandchildren by robbing them of hope and opportunity. Barry will continue fighting the Louisiana Political Establishment and continue working to build a heritage of blessings for our children and grandchildren through POLICIES that generate HOPE and produce OPPORTUNITIES here at home!

WELBORN
CLERK OF COURT

Letter to the Citizens of EBR Parish

PROVEN LEADERSHIP

It has been my honor to serve as your Clerk of Court for East Baton Rouge Parish. Over the years, our goal has been to pursue the latest and best advancements in technology, but always with the belief that it should supplement personal service but never replace it.

That's why if you want to take advantage of our popular electronic filing or recording services or make use of our extensive online research capabilities, you're in the right place!

But if you still enjoy the time-honored tradition of "service with a smile" in which we take pride, you're still in the right place! Our friendly team will be glad to see you face to face and provide service over and above that required to ensure that you leave with a smile.

The images below illustrate 1) A staff that I consider second to none and 2) The home screen to Clerk Connect, the gateway to e-filing, e-recording and the research of holdings dating to the earliest days of our parish. I would appreciate the opportunity to continue to bring you the quality public service that you deserve and the privilege of your vote during this election season.

Doug Welborn

Friendly, dedicated customer service or the convenience of technology — the choice is always available at the Clerk's Office!

Dr. John Fleming Endorsed for State Treasurer

Dr. John Fleming: Right Man in Charge of Money

Freedom Caucus Founder Brings A Lot to Louisiana State Government

Woody Jenkins
Editor

MINDEN — Dr. John Fleming is a man for all seasons. He could do anything he wants. Fortunately for us in Louisiana, he has devoted himself in recent years to public service. Dr. Fleming says, “I’m a family physician by trade.” In Minden, he is much beloved as the family doctor who has given so much of himself to save lives and make life better. He is board certified and a member of the American Academy of Family Physicians, which named him the Outstanding Family Physician of the Year in Louisiana.

However, Dr. Fleming is also a military man, having served as a family physician in the U.S. Navy. Among other things, he was Chief Resident in Family Medicine at Camp Pendleton in California, one of the largest Marine Corps bases in the United States.

In business, Dr. Fleming has been a massive success. He started in the Subway business in the 1980’s and today owns 35 Subway stores. He is also the master franchisee for 182 UPS stores in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas.

His experience in medicine, the military, and business helped him see the country was going to hell and that he needed to get involved in government. In 2008, he ran for and was elected to the United States Congress, where he immediately became one of the most principled and effective conservative leaders.

It was Dr. Fleming’s idea to form the Freedom Caucus in the House, and he was one of the nine founding members. Today, the Freedom Caucus is one of the most important vehicles for promoting the conservative agenda in Congress.

After President Trump was elected, he asked Dr. Fleming to join his administration. After serving as Assistant Secretary of Commerce, he was named by President Trump to serve as his Deputy Chief of State in the White House in March 2020.

Dr. Fleming’s office was just a few steps from the President. He had the President’s ear on many issues. His presence so near the Oval Office was important in combating the influence of Dr. Fauci.

Today, Dr. John Fleming is a candidate for State Treasurer. He intends to use this position to fight the digital currency and keep banks from handling state money if they pursue Woke policies. He is strongly supported by the Republican Party and by the Central City News.

McKanstry Top 10 National Finalist Headed to BMES Conference

Micah McKanstry
McKanstry Preparatory School

CENTRAL — Mc Kanstry Preparatory School on Greenwell Springs Road is proud to announce that Micah McKanstry, a 12th grade student at the school, has been named a national finalist to present a research paper at the Biomedical Engineering Society (BMES) annual conference in Seattle, Washington.

Micah’s research, which he conducted through the LSU High School Summer Research Program, is an ambitious research project focusing on the expression of genes from the human left heart ventricle.

Using Weighted Gene Co-Network Analysis (WGCNA), he explored the functional aspects of these genes in biological systems. His research has the potential to advance our understanding of cardiovascular health and has far-reaching implications for the future.

The school said, “What sets Micah apart is not only his passion for Bioengineering, but also his extraordinary work ethic. He is currently a Southern University Dual Enrollment student and has taken classes at Harvard University. He has nearly 40 college credit hours.”

“Micah’s journey is a source of immense pride for our school, and we believe his accomplishments deserve recognition. He is a young scholar whose work could likely shape the future of biomedical engineering in the future.”

ments of our case. This is unheard of that the purest religious jurisdictional case in America's history has been rejected by the most conservative court our nation has ever had. This is not a loss for our Church, this is a loss for our country, but still a proud day for us.

"Thank God for Chief Justice Roy Moore who called and spoke to us in the Church immediately after the first arrest. Thank God that after three and a half years (42 months and two days) from that day, Jeff Wittenbrink, Roy Moore, Woody Jenkins and a host of others have stood their ground, their feet have held their steps and have not gone backward.

"The 5th Circuit may feel they have had the last word with 'we insisted on taking a loss,' BUT, we know better. God always has the last word as the 'judge of all the earth.'

"Hebrews Chapter 11 is the faith chapter of the Bible; it rehearses the stories of the many heroes of faith who obtained great victories. However, the other side of faith is represented today where it may look like a loss, but really, we obtain a better resurrection.

"Hebrews 11:35 Women received their dead raised to life again; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection.

"Numbers 23:9 For from the top of the rocks I see him, and from the hills I behold him: lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

"Today, God, in His sovereignty, has decided another course of victory."

Get out and vote for Constitutional Amendment No. 2 this week in early voting or in your absentee ballot or in person on October 14. Make your own pronouncement about the supremacy of churches.

Mike Francis

His platform is exactly what is needed:

- Election integrity
- Stop vote fraud
- Continue to require photo ID
- Make sure voting precincts are kept free of corruption
- Audit elections
- Keep lists of registered voters up to date
- Purchase voting machines we can trust
- Have voting machines with a back up paper trail
- Continue to prohibit dropboxes in Louisiana
- Restrict mail ballots
- Work closely with clerks of court and registrars of voters
- Make sure every election is honest.

Mike Francis is a staunch conservative who is pro-life, pro-traditional family, and pro-gun.

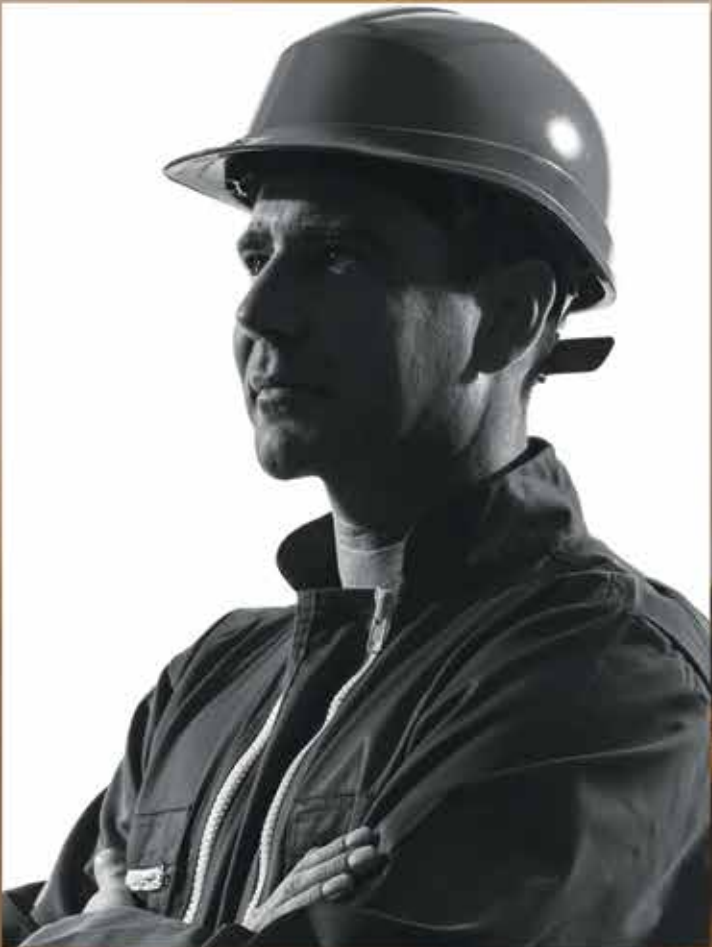

The Central City News is proud to endorse Mike Francis for Secretary of State on Oct. 14.
